R.I.P. TAXPAYERS

I DIDN'T REALIZE
THAT MY FAMILY
WOULD BE TAXED
WHEN I DIED

You shouldn't have to pay taxes when a loved one dies.

Tammy Duckworth could reinstate the Death Tax.

Tammy Duckworth, candidate for Congress, claims to protect Illinois taxpuyers, but her statements reveal otherwise. In the Chicago Tribune, Duckworth said she "would seriously consider repealing part" of the federal tax cuts. (1980) That means Illinois families could once again be required to pay the Death Tax.

The Death Tax unfairly punished families by making them pay a tax when a family member died. Family farms and small business owners were particularly at risk. Faced with increased taxes, families and small businesses felt pressure to sell their assets or close their doors. Many of these farms and small businesses were no longer able to remain profitable or expand their business because of the additional tax burden.

Apparently, when it comes to the financial security of Illinois' working families, Tammy Duckworth is more concerned with increasing taxes and spending your hard earned money.

Democrat Tammy Duckworth doesn't know what's best for Illinois families and small businesses. The Death Tax is a danger to the citizens of Illinois — don't let liberal Tammy Duckworth into Congress to bring it back.

Tammy Duckworth in Congress? She could raise our taxes!
